THE Sugababes don't need fancy frocks to rock the red carpet. They all looked stunning as they stepped out at this week's Q Awards in London. We love Amelle's checked number, £10 from Primark.

Love it Loathe it?

POSH was ever the trendsetter this week when she stepped out in Marc Jacobs spike heels to do a spot of shopping. And before you can say Jimmy Choo, the next celeb has jumped on the killer-heel bandwagon. Gorgeous actress Anne Hathaway wore similar shoes at Elle magazine's 15th Annual Women In Hollywood Tribute in Beverly Hills a couple of days later. But do you love the fetish-style heels? Or will you be passing on this particularly painful trend? Cast your vote at the link below.

Style SPOT

THE Chanel 2.55 has skipped its bag status and gone straight to cult classic. With celebrity fans including Mischa Barton, Kylie and Elle Macpherson, this quilted leather creation is the reason we have all been lusting after metal-strapped arm candy. Finally, the High Street has taken a little bit of Chanel-shaped inspiration and come up with these. Now that's what we call a chain reaction.

HOUSE of Fraser is a hotbed of new brands right now. After a major refurb of its menswear departments, the store has launched a new section dedicated to young, stylish labels such as Penguin, Gio-Goi and Lyle & Scott. But there's a quirky catch. The Test Bed area, as it has been named, sees the brands it hosts competing for floor space according to how well they sell. Think of it as the X Factor of the retail world. Just grab your boyfriend and get voting at the tills. The ranges change over every four weeks, so shopaholics won't get tired of checking out the same old stock. Plus there are tons of added extras such as the personal shopper service, perfect for guys who need a helping hand in the fashion stakes. Basically, this super store has everything you could need for your fella under one roof, which means more shopping time for you. Go to houseoffraser.co.uk for all the latest news and offers.
